One Page Biographical Sketch: B.R. Simon Rosser, Ph.D., M.P.H., L.P.

B.R. Simon Rosser, Ph.D., M.P.H., L.P., is professor and the founding director of the HIV/STI Intervention and Prevention Studies (HIPS) Program in the Division of Epidemiology and Community Health at the University of Minnesota School of Public Health. He has advanced degrees in psychology, epidemiology, behavioral medicine, and postdoctoral training in clinical/research sexology.

Simon was born and raised in New Zealand. In 1980, he helped establish Odyssey House, New Zealand's first drug rehabilitation therapeutic community. In 1983, with Bruce Burnett, Simon helped establish the AIDS Support Network, which later became the New Zealand AIDS Foundation. While a master's student at Auckland University, he trained the first AIDS buddy volunteers in his country.

In 1986, Simon moved to Australia to complete a Ph.D. in the effects of AIDS education on male homosexual behavior. On the strength of his research, he was awarded an Australian Commonwealth Scholarship, and in 1989, the first Ph.D. in HIV prevention research in the Southern Hemisphere.

In 1990, Simon immigrated to Minnesota. In 1992, he completed a postdoctoral clinical/research fellowship at the University of Minnesota's Program in Human Sexuality, and in 1997, he completed a second masters - a Masters in Public Health in epidemiology. Clinically, he specialized in the treatment of unsafe sexual behavior, HIV mental health, sexual orientation and religious identity conflicts, sex offending, and general sexology concerns. From 1993-2006 in the Medical School, he taught in undergraduate and graduate courses on human sexuality and preceptor to medical residents. In 2006, he transferred into the School of Public Health.

In 1991, Simon published the first book to evaluate the effects of AIDS education on male homosexual behavior, which was awarded an "Outstanding Academic Book" award by the American College Library Association's journal, Choice. His other books include Gay Catholics Down Under (Praeger, 1991); with Michael Wright and Onno de Zwart, he edited New International Directions in HIV Prevention for Gay and Bisexual Men (Haworth Press, 1998); with Michael Ross and Lorna Channon-Little, he wrote Sexual Health Concerns: Interviewing and History Taking for Health Practitioners (F.A. Davis, 2000); and with Julie Endersbe, was expert consultant for Homosexuality: What Does It Mean? (LifeMatters, 2000), a book for high risk teens.

In 1993, he developed the Man-to-Man: Sexual Health Seminars, a comprehensive human sexuality program for homosexually active men. In 1994, under a grant from the Swedish Institutes of Health, he trained Swedish HIV prevention workers in this initiative. From 1994-1998, he served on the Minnesota Health Commissioner's Task Force on HIV/STD Prevention. From 1998-2004, he collaborated with the Pan American Health Organization, World Health Organization, to provide advanced training to HIV prevention workers who work with Latino men who have sex with men. Since 2001, he has served as an ad hoc reviewer for the National Institutes of Health; since 2005, as a regular member on the Behavioral and Social Consequences of HIV/AIDS Study Section, and since 2010, a member of the College of CSR. He has been elected a full member of the International Academy for Sex research, elected fellow of the Society for the Scientific Study of Sex, and also fellow of the American Psychological Association (Division 44).

Simon is a prodigious researcher as evidenced by five books and approximately 120 peer reviewed publications. His major areas of research include HIV/STI prevention, unsafe sexual behavior, male homosexuality, sexual orientation conflict, religious and sexual identity formation, Internet-sex, effects of internalized homophobia, and sexual health promotion. From 2000-03, he was a visiting researcher in the Division of HIV/AIDS Prevention, Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC), in Atlanta, studying HIV prevention in 13 rural states. He has served as principal investigator or co-investigator on several federal and state funded studies. Currently he is principal investigator on an NIH-funded study of Internet sex among men.
